

John O'Connor, Rebel Voices, and Tim Hall plus a special reunion of Shays' Rebellion IN CONCERT

May 19th, 2018 7:30-10:00pm - $15.00 suggested donation
Washington State Labor Council - 321 16th Ave. S, Seattle 98144

If you like your folk music to be socially significant, this concert is for you. Shays' Rebellion, the quartet composed of Tim Hall, Susan Lewis, John O'Connor and Janet Stecher, came together in the mid-1980s and they captivated audiences with great tunes, fine harmonies and meaningful lyrics in the tradition of the Weavers and Peter, Paul and Mary. Their repertoire included many original songs by John, as well as traditional songs and contemporary labor and social justice material by the great topical songwriters of our age.

Fans were very disappointed when they split up; but now they're back!.....at least for this reunion concert.....at a time when we need to be inspired and energized by this kind of music.

The concert will consist of various solos, duos and trios, as well as a finale of the signature Shays' quartet arrangements of their inspiring and hard-hitting songs.

The late Joe Glazer said of John "He writes the best songs about labor you are likely to hear." John is stalwart in his focus on fighting for the working class and inspiring them with his music and their music.

Susan and Janet formed the duo Rebel Voices, whom Si Kahn has called "One of the greatest singing duos of our time." Their provocative repertoire combines political punch and wry wit with intricate harmony and dramatic flair.

Tim Hall, a multi-talented Northwest treasure, plays old-time, maritime, ragtime... anything that goes with his excellent guitar, banjo, and concertina skills - an eclectic repertoire of fun and interesting songs.

Due to the limited 100 seat capacity, reservations are encouraged. Please leave your name, email or phone # and the number of seats requested at rebelvoz@aol.com or 206.551.0818. We will return the message to confirm or inform you're on a waiting list.